W1D4-E03-Q03: A - The cafe will be closed. The cafe does not open at weekends.

W1D4-E03-Q04: C - The length of the route. Heavy rain may lead to a shorter walk.

Transcripts | correction only

W1D4-E03-R01 Hi, this is Rosa from the walking group. Saturday's walk will start at the old mill, not the station, because the footbridge is closed. The start time is still nine thirty. Bring a packed lunch; the cafe on the route is not open at weekends. We expect to finish by two, although heavy rain could mean taking a shorter route. Please reply by Thursday evening so we know whom to wait for.

W1D4-E04 | WRITING

Give feasible help rather than assuming expertise. In the discussion, distinguish offering assistance from interrupting a visitor.

W1D4-E04-Q01: Respond directly to “What would you enjoy about welcoming museum visitors?” and develop the answer with one reason, consequence or concrete example.

W1D4-E04-Q02: Respond directly to “A visitor looks confused but has not asked for help. What would you do?” and develop the answer with one reason, consequence or concrete example.

W1D4-E04-Q03: Respond directly to “Should volunteers give detailed explanations or let visitors explore independently?” and develop the answer with one reason, consequence or concrete example.

W2D4-E02 | GRAMMAR

W2D4-E02-Q01: B - consulted. would rather + subject + past form

W2D4-E02-Q02: A - checking. need + -ing has a passive meaning.

W2D4-E02-Q03: C - was. The nearer singular subject controls formal agreement here.

W2D4-E02-Q04: A - having. Despite takes a noun or -ing form.

W2D4-E03 | LISTENING

W2D4-E03-Q01: A - Beginner. The man states his original booking intention.

W2D4-E03-Q02: A - It assumes knowledge he lacks. Manual settings are unfamiliar to him.

W2D4-E03-Q03: B - Next month's course. He wants a definite date.

W2D4-E03-Q04: C - Send a new confirmation. The transfer has no extra charge.

Transcripts | correction only

W2D4-E03-R01 Man: I booked the beginner photography workshop, but the confirmation says intermediate. Woman: The beginner group was full, so the system offered the next available session. Man: I did not realise that. I can use the camera, but I do not understand manual settings. Woman: Then the intermediate class may move too quickly. I can put you on the waiting list for beginners or transfer your payment to next month's course. Man: I need a definite date, so next month is better. Woman: Fine. There is no extra charge, and I will send a revised confirmation.

W2D4-E04 | WRITING

Discuss access without assuming everyone can buy a book or use an electronic edition. Offer a reasoned allocation or staggered discussion.

W2D4-E04-Q01: Respond directly to “How do you choose a book you know nothing about?” and develop the answer with one reason, consequence or concrete example.

W2D4-E04-Q02: Respond directly to “What should happen when most members dislike the selected book?” and develop the answer with one reason, consequence or concrete example.

W2D4-E04-Q03: Respond directly to “Would shorter books make the group more inclusive?” and develop the answer with one reason, consequence or concrete example.

WEEK 3

W3D1

W3D1-E01 | VOCABULARY

W3D2-E01-Q05: A - with. combine one thing with another

W3D2-E02 | WRITING

Balance financial support against the effect of prominent advertising. A request must be negotiable and specific, not a general demand for more money.

W3D2-E02-Q01: Respond directly to “What makes a local festival memorable?” and develop the answer with one reason, consequence or concrete example.

W3D2-E02-Q02: Respond directly to “How could visitors be encouraged to try unfamiliar activities?” and develop the answer with one reason, consequence or concrete example.

W3D2-E02-Q03: Respond directly to “Should the programme prioritise local performers or well-known guests?” and develop the answer with one reason, consequence or concrete example.

W3D2-E03 | WRITING

Balance financial support against the effect of prominent advertising. A request must be negotiable and specific, not a general demand for more money.

W3D2-E03-Q01: Use an informal but clear tone; fulfil the reaction and shared-action request.

W3D2-E03-Q02: Use a polite formal register, explain a specific impact and justify a feasible request.

W3D3

W3D3-E01 | VOCABULARY

W3D3-E01-Q01: C - interchangeable. Interchangeable words can replace one another.

W3D3-E01-Q03: B - on. depend on

W3D3-E01-Q04: B - draw. draw a distinction

W3D3-E02-Q04: B - Comparison depends on what is visible.

W3D3-E02-Q05: E - Practice needs a manageable target.

W3D3-E02-Q06: H - An imperfect result can remain valuable.

W3D3-E02-Q07: D - A lesson beyond the workshop.

W3D3-E03 | SPEAKING

W3D3-E03-Q01: Answer and extend with a reason, not several unrelated facts.

W3D3-E03-Q02: Notes, audience, rehearsal; link the experience to a specific explanation.

W3D3-E03-Q03: Independent reading versus guided demonstration; consider safety and feedback.

W3D3-E03-Q04: Describe the feedback and your response, then qualify when immediate correction helps or interrupts.

W3D4

W3D4-E01 | VOCABULARY

W3D4-E01-Q01: C - principal. Principal is an adjective; principle is a noun.

W3D4-E01-Q02: A - verify. Verify means check whether it is true.

W3D4-E01-Q03: B - sequence. Sequence means the order in which things follow.

W3D4-E02-Q03: A - had. The expectation precedes the past assessment.

W3D4-E02-Q04: B - from. prevent someone from -ing

W3D4-E03 | LISTENING

W3D4-E03-Q01: A - Everyday experience was poorly represented. Written records said little about ordinary days.

W3D4-E03-Q02: C - Specific prompts and objects. Concrete cues supported memory.

W3D4-E03-Q03: B - They could support recollection. Silence need not indicate failure.

W3D4-E03-Q04: A - As valuable but partial accounts. The speaker explicitly limits their completeness.

Transcripts | correction only

W3D4-E03-R01 I began recording oral histories because written records said little about ordinary working days. At first I asked very broad questions, such as what life had been like. People often gave short, general answers. Bringing an object or asking them to describe one particular morning worked better. It gave memory something concrete to attach to. I also learned not to fill every silence. A pause could mean that someone was recalling a detail, not that the interview had failed. The recordings are valuable, but they are personal accounts rather than a complete or perfectly consistent record of the past.

W3D4-E04 | WRITING

Separate sentimental value from suitability for a shared collection. Give a practical policy and acknowledge what happens to books that cannot be displayed.

W3D4-E04-Q01: Respond directly to "What makes you keep a book after reading it?" and develop the answer with one reason, consequence or concrete example.

W3D4-E04-Q02: Respond directly to "How should an exchange handle damaged books?" and develop the answer with one reason, consequence or concrete example.

W3D4-E04-Q03: Respond directly to "Is a one-book-in, one-book-out rule always fair?" and develop the answer with one reason, consequence or concrete example.

WEEK 4

W4D1

W4D1-E01 | VOCABULARY

W4D1-E01-Q01: C - clarify. Clarify is the verb meaning make clear.

W4D1-E01-Q02: A - considerable inconvenience. Inconvenience is normally uncountable in this use.

W4D1-E01-Q03: C - concern. The possessive requires a noun.

W4D1-E01-Q04: A - within the next two days. A stated interval gives usable information.

W4D1-E01-Q05: B - the revised arrangement. Revised arrangement is a natural reference.

W4D1-E02 | Paraphrase without changing the claim

W4D1-E02-Q01: The wildlife survey will begin at seven, when the park is quieter and participants have a better chance of observing the birds.

22 words; retains time and purpose without claiming sightings are guaranteed.

W4D1-E03 | WRITING

Respect the purpose of observing birds early. A shared meeting point near public transport or a lift arrangement may be more realistic than insisting on 10 a.m.

W4D1-E03-Q01: Use an informal but clear tone; fulfil the reaction and shared-action request.

W4D1-E03-Q02: Use a polite formal register, explain a specific impact and justify a feasible request.

W4D2

W4D2-E01 | VOCABULARY

W4D2-E01-Q01: B - specify. Specify supplies exact details.

W4D2-E01-Q02: C - redundant. Redundant material adds nothing needed.

W4D2-E01-Q03: A - give you. give someone a lift

W4D2-E01-Q04: A - vague. Vague means insufficiently clear.

W4D2-E01-Q05: C - for. grateful for something

W4D2-E02 | Register, cohesion and repetition

W4D2-E02-Q01: Could you publish an outline rota a week in advance? Two days may not give members enough time to arrange transport or change work commitments, even if some details need confirming later.

32 words; specific impact and workable request.

W4D2-E02-Q02: I am finding the temporary rehearsal plans difficult to manage, especially with so little notice. When are you free next week? Perhaps we could compare the rota and work out which evenings suit us both.

35 words; natural informal language without SMS spelling.

W4D2-E02-Q03: Because the temporary room holds fewer people, some members will miss parts of rehearsals. Sending a short update afterwards would help them follow decisions and prepare for the scenes in which they are needed.

34 words; cause and practical consequence are linked.

W4D2-E03 | WRITING

Request an outline rota earlier, with later confirmation. Do not demand that everyone attend the smaller room or assume the move is permanent.

W4D2-E03-Q01: Use an informal but clear tone; fulfil the reaction and shared-action request.

W4D2-E03-Q02: Use a polite formal register, explain a specific impact and justify a feasible request.

W4D3

W4D3-E01 | VOCABULARY

W4D3-E01-Q01: A - make a complaint. make a complaint

W4D3-E01-Q02: A - dismisses. Dismiss means treat as unworthy of attention.

W4D3-E01-Q03: B - impression. give the impression that

W4D3-E01-Q04: C - step. next step in a process

W4D3-E01-Q05: B - concise. Concise is positive about efficient expression.

W4D3-E02 | Why a clear apology is difficult to write

W4D3-E02-Q01: H - A message that evades its own purpose.

W4D3-E02-Q02: E - Naming the event reduces uncertainty.

W4D3-E02-Q03: F - Reasons can be mistaken for excuses.

W4D3-E02-Q04: A - A promise needs a practical boundary.

W4D3-E02-Q05: B - Not every reader needs every detail.

W4D3-E02-Q06: G - Warmth comes from attention.

W4D3-E02-Q07: D - The final test is the reader's next step.

W4D3-E03 | SPEAKING

W4D3-E03-Q01: Keep the personal answers natural and within 30 seconds.

W4D3-E03-Q02: Booking record, confirmation, clarification; do not assume who is at fault.

W4D3-E03-Q03: Fixed notice versus interactive explanation; compare permanence and opportunity for questions.

W4D3-E03-Q04: Show audience awareness; distinguish clarity from bluntness and politeness from vagueness.

W4D3-E04 | Formulation and editing

W4D3-E04-Q01: We are sorry that the workshop was cancelled after you arrived.

Name the definite event and its effect.

W4D3-E04-Q02: However.

Distance contrasts with the benefit; it is not a result of quietness.

W4D3-E04-Q03: The new system may have a positive effect on attendance.

May preserves uncertainty; have an effect on is the natural pattern.

W4D4

W4D4-E01 | VOCABULARY

W4D4-E01-Q01: B - to. refer to

W4D4-E01-Q02: C - Could you reply by Friday?. The deadline is clear without an unnecessarily aggressive tone.

W4D4-E01-Q03: C - shortening. Shorten a sentence.

W4D4-E01-Q04: A - however. However signals contrast.

W4D4-E01-Q05: A - precisely. An adverb modifies uses.

W4D4-E02 | Repair recurrent B2 errors

W4D4-E02-Q01: I would appreciate it if you could explain the new rule.

Appreciate needs the object it in this construction.

W4D4-E02-Q02: The policy will affect members who work shifts.

Affect is transitive; no to.

W4D4-E02-Q03: Although the rule is understandable, an appeal should be possible.

Although introduces a clause. Alternatively: Despite the rule being understandable ...

W4D4-E02-Q04: I suggest sending a reminder before each class.

Suggest + -ing; not suggest to do.

W4D4-E03 | LISTENING

W4D4-E03-Q01: C - It makes a definite problem sound uncertain. May have occurred avoids naming the known event.

W4D4-E03-Q02: A - An apology. The woman recommends apology first.

W4D4-E03-Q03: B - Whether readers must take action. The reader needs a next step or confirmation none is needed.

W4D4-E03-Q04: B - Clarity matters more than vague formality. The advice favours direct, useful information.

Transcripts | correction only

W4D4-E03-R01 Woman: Your draft says, 'We regret any inconvenience that may have occurred.' But the event was definitely cancelled.

Man: I was trying to sound professional. Woman: Naming the cancellation would be clearer. Then explain the refund. Man: Should I put the technical reason first? Woman: I would apologise first. Otherwise it may sound as if you are making an excuse. Man: And the closing?

Woman: Tell readers whether they need to do anything. If the refund is automatic, that is more useful than a vague promise that we value their support.

W4D4-E04 | Edit for fulfilment, word count and naturalness

W4D4-E04-Q01: Hi Mel, the new booking rule seems reasonable, but I am worried about forgetting to cancel when work gets busy. Shall we set phone reminders before our classes? That should help us avoid wasting places and losing online booking access. Let me know. Jo 44 words; reaction and joint action retained.

W4D4-E04-Q02: B. It proposes two practical safeguards while recognising that the centre has a reason to reduce missed bookings.

A rejects the entire policy without a supported alternative.

W4D4-E04-Q03: I would be grateful if you could review the reminder and appeal options before the policy begins. These changes could reduce missed bookings while giving members a fair way to explain exceptional circumstances.

33 words; a precise request and intended benefit replace vague evaluation.

WEEK 5

W5D1

W5D1-E01 | VOCABULARY

W5D1-E01-Q01: C - imminent. Imminent means about to happen.

W5D1-E01-Q02: B - point. get to the point

W5D1-E01-Q03: A - promptly. Promptly means without delay.

W5D1-E01-Q04: A - settle on. Settle on means choose.

W5D1-E01-Q05: B - skim. Skimming is rapid reading for overall meaning.

W5D1-E02 | WRITING

W5D1-E02-Q01: Answer both elements of the request: Explain which local place interests you and what you would like to discover about it. Avoid general background that leaves either point unanswered.

W5D1-E03 | WRITING

Make a clear choice and justify breadth versus depth. An optional handout or later route can support the choice without pretending the time limit has vanished.

W5D1-E03-Q01: Use an informal but clear tone; fulfil the reaction and shared-action request.

W5D1-E03-Q02: Use a polite formal register, explain a specific impact and justify a feasible request.

W5D2

W5D3-E02-Q01: B - The apparently obvious explanation.

W5D3-E02-Q02: G - Two displays represent different moments.

W5D3-E02-Q03: H - An unnoticed cue loses its meaning.

W5D3-E02-Q04: D - The investigation changes its question.

W5D3-E02-Q05: A - A deliberately less complete display.

W5D3-E02-Q06: E - Testing under an unusual condition.

W5D3-E02-Q07: F - Trust includes the admission of uncertainty.

W5D3-E03 | SPEAKING

W5D3-E03-Q01: Begin promptly; use one example without overexplaining.

W5D3-E03-Q02: Concourse, departure board, luggage; prioritise the main action.

W5D3-E03-Q03: Separate visible conditions from unsupported assumptions about speed or distance.

W5D3-E03-Q04: Give a concrete trade-off; errors and rework may cancel a small time saving.

W5D4

W5D4-E01 | VOCABULARY

W5D4-E01-Q01: B - rapid. Swift means quick.

W5D4-E01-Q02: A - subtle. Subtle describes a distinction that is not immediately obvious.

W5D4-E01-Q03: C - tackle. Tackle a problem means deal with it.

W5D4-E03 | LISTENING

W5D4-E03-Q01: B - A very short connection. Only four minutes to change platforms.

W5D4-E03-Q02: A - Unfamiliarity with the station. The speaker had a bag and did not know the station.

W5D4-E03-Q03: C - Twelve additional minutes overall. The second option was twelve minutes longer.

W5D4-E03-Q04: A - The best route depends partly on the traveller. The speaker allows a different decision in different circumstances.

Transcripts | correction only

W5D4-E03-R01 The route planner suggested the fastest train, but that option allowed only four minutes to change platforms. I had a large bag and did not know the station. The next train took twelve minutes longer overall but gave me a comfortable connection. I chose it and arrived without rushing. If I had been travelling light through a familiar station, I might have made a different decision. Fastest on paper is not always the most useful option for the person actually making the journey.

W5D4-E04 | WRITING

Prioritise a feasible action and avoid unsupported promises. Distinguish a memorable message from an exaggerated one.

W5D4-E04-Q01: Respond directly to "What makes a campaign message memorable?" and develop the answer with one reason, consequence or concrete example.

W5D4-E04-Q02: Respond directly to "How can volunteers avoid exaggerating a claim?" and develop the answer with one reason, consequence or concrete example.

W5D4-E04-Q03: Respond directly to "Should a campaign target individual habits or organisational decisions first?" and develop the answer with one reason, consequence or concrete example.

WEEK 6

W6D1

W6D1-E01 | VOCABULARY

W6D1-E01-Q01: B - tempered. Tempered means moderated rather than removed.

W6D2-E05 | WRITING

W6D2-E05-Q01: Answer both elements of the request: Describe the kind of writing you do and what feedback would help you most. Avoid general background that leaves either point unanswered.

W6D2-E02 | WRITING

Address both the submission schedule and fair distribution of feedback. An occasional observer role or a later cycle is more coherent than ignoring the deadline.

W6D2-E02-Q01: Respond directly to “How do you decide whether to use a reader's suggestion?” and develop the answer with one reason, consequence or concrete example.

W6D2-E02-Q02: Respond directly to “Is a fixed deadline helpful for creative work?” and develop the answer with one reason, consequence or concrete example.

W6D2-E02-Q03: Respond directly to “Should a group comment on unfinished drafts or only complete pieces?” and develop the answer with one reason, consequence or concrete example.

W6D2-E03 | WRITING

Address both the submission schedule and fair distribution of feedback. An occasional observer role or a later cycle is more coherent than ignoring the deadline.

W6D2-E03-Q01: Use an informal but clear tone; fulfil the reaction and shared-action request.

W6D2-E03-Q02: Use a polite formal register, explain a specific impact and justify a feasible request.

W6D3

W6D4-E03 | LISTENING

W6D4-E03-Q01: A - Some costs of the wider process. Returns and washing transport were initially overlooked.

W6D4-E03-Q02: C - They adjusted the system. They improved returns and local cleaning.

W6D4-E03-Q03: C - A product label alone proves its overall benefit. Reusable does not settle every aspect of impact.

W6D4-E03-Q04: B - Supportive of improvement through evaluation. The scheme continues with evidence-based changes.

Transcripts | correction only

W6D4-E03-R01 When the town introduced reusable cups at its festival, the first report focused on how many disposable cups had been avoided. That was useful, but it did not tell the whole story. Some reusable cups were not returned, and others had to be transported a long distance for washing. The organisers did not abandon the scheme. They changed the return points and arranged local cleaning for the next event. The lesson was to examine the whole process rather than assume that the name of a product establishes its benefit.

W6D4-E04 | WRITING

Use relevance and faithful editing as criteria. Explain why removing all hesitation may change the impression of a speaker.

W6D4-E04-Q01: Respond directly to "What makes a short interview engaging?" and develop the answer with one reason, consequence or concrete example.

W6D4-E04-Q02: Respond directly to "How should a presenter respond when a guest avoids the question?" and develop the answer with one reason, consequence or concrete example.

W6D4-E04-Q03: Respond directly to "Should recorded interviews be edited to remove every hesitation?" and develop the answer with one reason, consequence or concrete example.

W7D4-E03-Q04: C - Request a design showing the compromise. They want to see the proposed version before deciding.

Transcripts | correction only

W7D4-E03-R01 Woman: The old station waiting room could be a useful reading space. Man: I like the idea, but the architect wants to remove the wooden benches. They are part of its character. Woman: Some are damaged beyond practical repair. We could retain one section and use chairs that are easier to move elsewhere. Man: Would that make it feel like any modern room? Woman: Not if we keep the tiled floor and explain how the original space was used. Preserving every object is not the only way to preserve its history. Man: I could support that if the surviving bench remains usable rather than being fenced off as a display. Woman: That seems reasonable. Let us ask the architect to show that version before deciding.

W7D4-E04 | WRITING

Differentiate feedback on delivery from evidence and reasoning. Suggest a brief reaction plus later detail if justified.

W7D4-E04-Q01: Respond directly to “What makes an opening effective without being dramatic?” and develop the answer with one reason, consequence or concrete example.

W8D4-E03-Q02: A - It helped but did not solve the scheduling issue. The mat reduced sound only partly.

W8D4-E03-Q03: C - Their needs may change over time. The speaker does not expect a permanent fit.

W8D4-E03-Q04: B - A constructive way to negotiate future changes. The agreement creates a process for discussing needs.

Transcripts | correction only

W8D4-E03-R01 I practise the piano in a flat, and a neighbour recently asked whether I could avoid the early evening. I had assumed that was a considerate time because it was neither early nor late. It turned out to be when her child was trying to study. We discussed a schedule rather than arguing about who had the more reasonable routine. A sound-reducing mat helped a little, but it did not remove the need to agree times. We settled on shorter practice periods at times we could both manage and agreed to review them after a fortnight. I do not think the arrangement will suit us forever. What matters is that we now have a way to discuss a change before it becomes a complaint. The useful result was not perfect silence, but a workable understanding of each other's needs.

W8D4-E04 | WRITING

Use a balanced explanation of tradition and adaptation. Make instructions testable and name substitutions accurately rather than claiming equivalence without qualification.

W8D4-E04-Q01: Respond directly to "What can a recipe leave unexplained for a beginner?" and develop the answer with one reason, consequence or concrete example.

W8D4-E04-Q02: Respond directly to "How should a club adapt a dish when an ingredient is unavailable?" and develop the answer with one reason, consequence or concrete example.

W8D4-E04-Q03: Respond directly to "Is preserving a tradition compatible with changing a recipe?" and develop the answer with one reason, consequence or concrete example.

Address loss of the site, not a weather cancellation. Payments can transfer; do not assert an unavailable refund. Request a date estimate or workshop details relevant to your recommendation.

MOCK01-WRITE-P4-Q01: Use an informal but clear tone; fulfil the reaction and shared-action request.

One possible response (44 words): Hi Dan, I would choose the indoor workshop rather than wait for another observation date. We could learn how to read the maps before going outside next time. Shall we transfer our payments together and ask whether we need to bring anything? Cheers, Ali.

MOCK01-WRITE-P4-Q02: Use a polite formal register, explain a specific impact and justify a feasible request.

One possible response (125 words): Dear Club Organiser, I would like to recommend the indoor sky-mapping workshop on the original date. Although I was looking forward to observing outdoors, keeping the date would help members who have already arranged transport or time away from work. An indoor introduction could also prepare beginners to use the maps more confidently during a later observation night. Could you confirm what the workshop will cover and whether members need to bring any equipment? It would be helpful to explain how payments will be transferred before asking us to choose. Members who prefer to wait should also receive an update on the search for a new site, even if a date cannot yet be guaranteed. Thank you for considering these suggestions. Yours sincerely, Ali Khan.

Hi, it's Nina. I found your scarf in the rehearsal room. I cannot stay until you arrive, so I have left it with the receptionist. The room will be locked after six, but the reception desk is staffed until eight.

MOCK01-LIST-R02

The normal adult fare is twelve pounds. Students pay nine, but this weekend anyone arriving by bicycle can enter for seven pounds. You cannot combine that offer with another discount.

MOCK01-LIST-R03

Please bring an apron to the workshop. We supply the tools and all the clay you will need. You are welcome to bring your own brushes, although there will be plenty here to share.

MOCK01-LIST-R04

I tried the sports shop near the station, but they had sold out of that size. The branch in the shopping centre has reserved a pair for me. I will collect them there after work.

MOCK01-LIST-R05

The lecture is still in Room 4, but please enter through the courtyard. The front steps are being repaired. The side door is for deliveries and will remain closed to visitors.

Woman: Shall we eat before the film? Man: There is not much time. Let's buy a sandwich afterwards. Woman: Fine. I will meet you inside the cinema, beside the ticket machine.

MOCK01-LIST-R08

The first parcel arrived yesterday, but it contained only the frame. The wheels will come tomorrow. Once those are fitted, you can collect the bicycle on Friday afternoon.

MOCK01-LIST-R09

I enjoyed the exhibition, especially the photographs. The sculpture room was closed, which was disappointing, but the temporary display of maps made the visit worthwhile.

This is a reminder that library loans can be renewed online unless another reader has reserved the item. If there is a reservation, return the book by its original due date.

MOCK01-LIST-R11

I normally cycle to the office. Today the chain broke, so I took a bus to the station and walked the final ten minutes. The bicycle is still at home.

MOCK01-LIST-R12

The bag is dark blue with a silver zip. There is no name label, but a small orange key ring is attached to the handle. I left it under a chair in the waiting area.

MOCK01-LIST-R13

You do not need to print the confirmation. Show the booking code on your phone when you arrive. Bring photo identification as well, because the booking cannot be transferred to another person.

MOCK01-LIST-R14

I signed up after finding a box of old photographs of our street. I wanted to know why the buildings had changed and who had lived there. The group has shown me where to find maps and records. I am not interested in collecting valuable objects; understanding the place matters more.

MOCK01-LIST-R15

Walking alone was becoming an excuse to stay at home. Since joining, I have gone out regularly because someone is expecting me. We do not compete or discuss training targets. Having people to talk to makes the distance pass without my noticing it.

MOCK01-LIST-R16

My next role involves explaining products to customers. I know the technical information, but speaking confidently to strangers is new to me. The sessions let me practise that in a setting where mistakes have no serious consequences. I hope the experience will help when I start work.

MOCK01-LIST-R17

I was tired of throwing things away whenever a small part broke. Here someone shows me how to identify the fault and use the right tool. I am not planning to turn it into a business. I just want to keep ordinary household items working for longer.

MOCK01-LIST-R18

Man: I like the new cycle route. Being separated from traffic makes me feel safer, although the signs at the junction are confusing.

Woman: I agree about the separation. I used it yesterday and felt much less exposed. The signs seemed clear to me, but there is nowhere secure to leave a bicycle at the far end.

Man: I had not noticed that. I usually continue to my office, where there is storage. What worries me is that the route stops abruptly before the last junction.

Woman: Yes, that unfinished section needs attention. I would rather the council completed it before adding decorative planting.

Man: So would I. The route is useful already, but connecting the final section should be the priority.

Woman: And afterwards they can consider parking. People need to do something with their bicycles when they arrive.

MOCK01-LIST-R19

When our amateur orchestra lost its rehearsal room, I assumed the difficult part would be finding another room of the right size. We found one quickly, but the sound was completely different. Players who had relied on hearing a neighbouring instrument suddenly felt isolated. At first we blamed one another for poor timing. Our conductor asked us to record a passage from several positions and listen back. The recordings showed that people in different seats were hearing different balances, even though we were playing together. We moved some chairs and spent time listening across the group rather than simply increasing the volume. The change did not make the new room sound like the old one. It taught us to adapt instead of treating our familiar experience as the only correct one. I would not choose to lose a rehearsal space again, but the disruption exposed a weakness in our listening that comfort had allowed us to ignore. We now change positions occasionally, even when we do not have to. It is a small way of checking that we are responding to the music rather than relying entirely on habit.

MOCK01-LIST-R20

I used to write long descriptions for every item in our small museum. I thought that if I left something out, visitors would miss an important part of the story. Then I watched people move through the gallery. Many read the first sentence and walked on. The problem was not that they lacked interest; I was asking them to do too much before they knew why an object mattered. We rewrote the labels with a short opening that identified one significant detail. More information remained available in a booklet for anyone who wanted it. I worried that the shorter labels would oversimplify the objects, so we checked every sentence carefully and avoided claims the evidence could not support. The result was not less serious. It offered different levels of access to the same material. Visitors began discussing details they had previously passed without noticing. I still believe in depth, but I no longer assume that depth must be presented all at once. A good opening creates a reason to continue; it does not need to contain the entire argument.

Distinguish basic clothing from specialised costume pieces. Consider unequal personal resources and avoid assuming performers must buy expensive items.

MOCK02-WRITE-P4-Q01: Use an informal but clear tone; fulfil the reaction and shared-action request.

One possible response (45 words): Hi Bea, the costume budget cut is worrying, especially if performers feel they must buy new clothes. I think we should inspect the existing costumes first. Could you help me list what can be altered before we ask anyone to bring things in? Thanks, Rowan.

MOCK02-WRITE-P4-Q02: Use a polite formal register, explain a specific impact and justify a feasible request.

One possible response (124 words): Dear Theatre Coordinator, I suggest beginning with a review of the costumes already available before asking performers to supply clothing. Reusing suitable items would reduce costs without assuming that everyone can afford additional purchases. Some basic pieces could then be borrowed from performers, provided participation is voluntary and the requirements are clear. Could the group receive a list distinguishing ordinary clothing from the specialised items the theatre will provide? This would prevent misunderstandings and help us identify genuine gaps. I would also recommend a private way for performers to explain if they cannot supply a requested item. The group could then look for an alternative without drawing attention to individual circumstances. I am happy to help organise the initial review. Yours sincerely, Rowan Ellis.

MOCK02 | LISTENING TRANSCRIPTS

MOCK02-LIST-R01

The pool is open as usual, but the lockers in the lower changing room cannot be used today. Please change upstairs. The lift is working, and staff can help you find it.

MOCK02-LIST-R02

I thought the interview was on Tuesday, but that is the date of the written task. The interview is two days later, on Thursday. Both start at ten.

MOCK02-LIST-R03

If you ordered the vegetarian meal, collect a green ticket at reception. Blue tickets are for the standard meal. Anyone who has not ordered can buy a meal at the counter, subject to availability.

MOCK02-LIST-R04

Woman: Did the mechanic change the tyres? Man: They were fine. He replaced the brake cable and adjusted the seat, but the cable was the only new part.

MOCK02-LIST-R05

The shop closes at five, but online orders placed before six will still be processed today. Orders received after six will be dealt with tomorrow morning.

MOCK02-LIST-R06

The walk covers eight kilometres, mostly on level paths. The final kilometre includes a steep climb. Wear shoes with a good grip; ordinary trainers may be uncomfortable if the ground is wet.

MOCK02-LIST-R07

Please leave glass bottles beside the recycling containers, not inside them. Paper and card go in the container on the left. The one on the right is for plastic packaging.

MOCK02-LIST-R08

The replacement charger has been dispatched. There is no charge for the item itself, but you will see a three-pound delivery fee on your account. We have cancelled the earlier five-pound estimate.

MOCK02-LIST-R09

We have moved the poetry reading from the cafe to the bookshop's upstairs room. It is quieter there. Drinks will still be available from the cafe downstairs during the interval.

MOCK02-LIST-R10

I can lend you the tent, but one pole is missing. My neighbour has a spare pole of the right length. Pick that up from her before you leave; the pegs are already in the bag.

MOCK02-LIST-R11

The workshop is for adults, although teenagers aged sixteen or over may attend with an adult. Younger children can join the separate session on Sunday.

MOCK02-LIST-R12

Man: Do we need to buy the tickets together? Woman: No, but use the same group code. Otherwise the system may put us in different sections, even if we book at the same time.

MOCK02-LIST-R13

The parcel was left with the neighbour at number eighteen. Your house is number eighty, and the driver has reported the error. We will collect it from eighteen and bring it to you this afternoon.

MOCK02-LIST-R14

I lose momentum if every week is different. Knowing that Tuesday evening is reserved for the class means I do not have to make the decision again. The course materials are useful, but the regular appointment is what keeps me involved when work becomes busy.

MOCK02-LIST-R15

The demonstrations help more than long explanations. Once I can see a completed piece and the stages that produced it, the instructions make sense. I still ask questions, but I need a concrete model before I can understand what the general advice is referring to.

MOCK02-LIST-R16

We are preparing a short show for the end of term. Having an audience to work towards gives our rehearsals a purpose. I would probably practise less if nobody beyond the group were ever going to hear the result. The performance matters more to me than a certificate.

MOCK02-LIST-R17

When I practise at home, I cannot always tell whether I am repeating the same mistake. In class the tutor notices it and explains the adjustment straight away. That quick response stops a small problem becoming a habit. I do not need someone directing every step, just timely correction.

MOCK02-LIST-R18

Woman: I enjoyed the museum's evening opening. The smaller crowd meant I could spend longer looking at each display.

Man: It was certainly quieter. But I missed the guided tour; I learn more when someone explains the connection between objects.

Woman: I prefer choosing my own route. The labels gave me enough context, and I could leave a section when I lost interest.

Man: The labels were useful, though some were difficult to read in the low light. I would change that before extending the evening programme.

Woman: I did not struggle with the labels, but the cafe closing halfway through the visit was inconvenient.

Man: Yes, if they invite people to stay until nine, refreshments should be available later. I would still go again.

Woman: So would I. I might take a friend who finds daytime crowds overwhelming.

MOCK02-LIST-R19

My first attempt at running a book exchange was based on a simple rule: bring one book and take one away. I liked the fairness of it. Within a month, however, the shelves filled with books nobody wanted, while attractive titles disappeared immediately. Strict equality of numbers was not producing a useful collection. We changed the arrangement so people could donate without taking anything, and we set aside damaged or unsuitable items instead of putting everything on display. Some regulars worried that we were becoming too selective. I understood the concern, but a shelf that nobody could find anything on was not serving the neighbourhood either. We published a short explanation of what we accepted and offered suggestions for other places to take books we could not use. The exchange is smaller now, yet more people return to it. I learned that a rule can sound fair in the abstract and still need revision when you see its consequences. We have kept the spirit of sharing, while letting go of a formula that was making sharing less useful.

MOCK02-LIST-R20

I signed up for an evening drawing course after years of saying I had no talent. The first lesson did not transform that belief. My drawings were awkward, and comparing them with the tutor's work made the gap seem enormous. What changed things was a task in which we drew the same ordinary object several times, each time concentrating on a different relationship: its height compared with its width, or the space between two edges. I stopped asking whether the whole picture was good and began noticing what I could adjust. The course did not promise that everyone would become a professional artist. That honesty made it easier to practise. I could value a skill without requiring it to become a career or a public achievement. I now draw regularly, sometimes badly, but with a clearer understanding of what I am trying to see. The greatest change is not that I always like the result. It is that an unsatisfactory result gives me a next step instead of confirming a permanent judgement about myself.

MOCK03-WRITE-P4-Q02: Use a polite formal register, explain a specific impact and justify a feasible request.

One possible response (125 words): Dear Workshop Coordinator, I understand why members must complete an induction before using shared tools independently. Clear safety preparation should help protect both users and equipment. However, the current afternoon timetable may exclude members who work regular office hours, including me. Could you consider one evening induction each month, perhaps with advance booking to make staffing manageable? I appreciate that supervised repair sessions remain available, and I will use those while waiting for an induction I can attend. It would help if the booking page clearly distinguished these sessions from independent workshop access. Please also let members know how to register interest in an alternative induction time, so that you can judge demand before committing resources. Thank you for your help. Yours sincerely, Kim Morgan.

Woman: Was the concert too loud? Man: Not from where I sat. My problem was that a pillar blocked part of the stage. I could hear everything but could not see the drummer.

The discount applies to purchases over forty pounds. Delivery is free on orders over sixty. Your order is fifty-two pounds after the discount, so delivery will still be added.

MOCK03-LIST-R07

I left the keys in the kitchen drawer rather than on the hook. The hook had come loose. The spare set is still with Dad, so use the ones in the drawer tonight.

MOCK03-LIST-R08

You may photograph the permanent collection without flash. Photography is not permitted in the visiting exhibition, even for personal use. Signs at its entrance mark the boundary.

MOCK03-LIST-R09

The speaker's train has been delayed. Rather than postpone the whole programme, we will start with the practical activity and hold the talk after lunch.

MOCK03-LIST-R10

The new printer is cheaper to buy, but its cartridges cost more. Since we print hundreds of pages a week, I would keep the current machine until we calculate the total running cost.

MOCK03-LIST-R11

The campsite has drinking water but no shop. The village shop closes before you are likely to arrive, so buy food before setting out. You can refill water bottles at the site.

MOCK03-LIST-R12

I sent the draft to you this morning, but use the file attached to this message. The earlier one still had the old prices in the final table. The text itself has not changed.

MOCK03-LIST-R13

The bus ticket is valid all day, but only within the city boundary. To reach the airport, you need a separate extension, which can be purchased from the driver.

MOCK03-LIST-R14

I nearly ordered a replacement online, but the shop assistant asked how I used the old model and what had actually failed. It turned out I needed a different specification from the one I had selected. That conversation saved me an expensive mistake before I spent anything.

MOCK03-LIST-R15

The item worked well for a month, then developed a fault. The website promised support, but each reply asked me to repeat information I had already sent. I would not criticise the original delivery or the design. It was the way the problem was handled afterwards that disappointed me.

MOCK03-LIST-R16

The technician explained that one worn component was responsible for the noise. Replacing it cost much less than a new machine, and the rest was in good condition. I liked being given that choice rather than being pushed towards another purchase. The machine has been reliable since.

MOCK03-LIST-R17

I picked the lowest-priced version because the photographs looked almost identical. After a few weeks, the thin material began to split. The more expensive one would probably have lasted longer. The order arrived promptly, but saving money at the checkout proved a poor bargain.

MOCK03-LIST-R18

Man: Our team trialled a four-day schedule. I expected the shorter week to make us rush, but we cut unnecessary meetings instead.

Woman: That sounds promising. In my department the customer desk has to be staffed every weekday, so simply closing on Friday would not work.

Man: We staggered our days off. Customers still had someone to contact, though arranging cover took more planning than we had expected.

Woman: That planning is the part people tend to overlook. I would want to know who handles urgent questions when the usual contact is away.

Man: We wrote handover notes. They took time, but they also exposed tasks that only one person understood. Sharing that knowledge was a benefit I had not predicted.

Woman: I can see the value of that. I am still not convinced the arrangement would suit every team.

Man: Nor am I. It depends on the work and on whether managers are willing to change routines, rather than squeeze five unchanged days into four.

MOCK03-LIST-R19

Our company introduced a tool that automatically summarised customer messages. At first the team welcomed it because the summaries were short and easy to scan. Then we noticed a problem. A customer might describe a difficulty, mention a failed attempt to solve it and ask for one specific action. The summary sometimes retained the difficulty but omitted the failed attempt. Staff then suggested the very action the customer had already tried. The sentences in the summary were not necessarily false; the missing relationship made the response unhelpful. We now use the tool to locate relevant messages, but staff read the original before deciding what to do. This costs more time than relying on the summary alone. It also avoids exchanges that would consume time later and damage trust. I am not opposed to the technology. I object to judging its value only by how quickly it produces a readable paragraph. The relevant test is whether it helps us understand the request well enough to respond appropriately. A shorter text is useful only if the reduction preserves the distinctions on which the next decision depends.

MOCK03-LIST-R20

When I became responsible for our volunteer rota, I tried to make it perfectly equal. Everyone received the same number of hours and the same share of unpopular shifts. I was surprised when several reliable volunteers became less willing to help. Talking to them revealed that equal hours did not create equal burdens. One person depended on the last bus, another could work only after a caring commitment, and someone else preferred the quiet early shift that others disliked. We replaced the identical allocation with a system that recorded preferences and constraints. It was not possible to satisfy every request, so we explained how conflicts would be handled and reviewed the pattern over time. The new rota looks less symmetrical, but people understand its reasoning better. I would still be concerned if the same few people repeatedly carried the difficult work. Flexibility should not become an excuse for favouritism. The lesson was that fairness requires attention to circumstances as well as a rule, and that people need to see how exceptions connect to a consistent purpose.

MOCK04-LIST-P1-Q01: B - The room number. Only the allocated room may change.
MOCK04-LIST-P1-Q02: B - Additional parts. Uninspected parts may add cost, subject to contact.
MOCK04-LIST-P1-Q03: A - Agreement on the evidence required. The speaker identifies agreement about evidence as progress.
MOCK04-LIST-P1-Q04: B - Current paid access continues. Cancellation affects renewal, not the current paid period.
MOCK04-LIST-P1-Q05: A - A meal has been included. The optional meal is selected, not a price increase.
MOCK04-LIST-P1-Q06: A - An assistant for the demonstration. The speaker remains remote; a local person must handle equipment.
MOCK04-LIST-P1-Q07: B - In the appendix. The summary uses rounding; the appendix has exact amounts.
MOCK04-LIST-P1-Q08: B - A longer reservation. The deposit extends the hold and counts towards payment.
MOCK04-LIST-P1-Q09: A - The advanced activity. Only the advanced activity is limited to the morning.
MOCK04-LIST-P1-Q10: C - An explanation of the symbols. They agree to add a map key.
MOCK04-LIST-P1-Q11: B - Keep the original temporarily. The advice avoids a period with no usable item.
MOCK04-LIST-P1-Q12: A - Former visitors. People who stopped attending responded less.

MOCK04-LIST-P3-Q01: C - Both. Both ask for costs beyond the initial purchase.
MOCK04-LIST-P3-Q02: B - Woman. The woman raises a binding result despite tiny turnout; the man emphasises representation instead.
MOCK04-LIST-P3-Q03: C - Both. The man raises representation and the woman agrees.
MOCK04-LIST-P3-Q04: B - Woman. Only the woman specifies a deadline.

MOCK04-LIST-P41 | LISTENING

MOCK04-LIST-P41-Q01: A - The overall increase concealed changes among the intended users. The issue was interpretation of the total, not arithmetic or proof of all causes.
MOCK04-LIST-P41-Q02: B - Evaluation must remain capable of qualifying a preferred conclusion. The recommendation became narrower rather than the figures being discarded.

MOCK04-LIST-P42 | LISTENING

MOCK04-LIST-P42-Q01: A - Availability did not ensure that people understood the relevant choices. The central distinction is access to information versus intelligibility.
MOCK04-LIST-P42-Q02: C - Useful if its selection of information is checked critically. The speaker keeps the report and checks omitted trade-offs.

MOCK04-WRITE-P3-Q02: Respond directly to “How might recording an event change the way people behave?” and develop the answer with one reason, consequence or concrete example.

MOCK04-WRITE-P3-Q03: Respond directly to “Should an archive preserve everyday sounds even when their future value is uncertain?” and develop the answer with one reason, consequence or concrete example.

MOCK04-WRITE-P4 | WRITING

Distinguish permission to shorten a recording from approval of its changed context. Request contributor review and a clear process for informing identifiable speakers; avoid giving invented legal rules.

MOCK04-WRITE-P4-Q01: Use an informal but clear tone; fulfil the reaction and shared-action request.

One possible response (44 words): Hi Noor, publishing the recordings could make the archive much more interesting, but I want to understand how edits will be checked. Before we record the market, shall we ask how contributors review shortened versions and how other speakers will be informed? Best, Alex.

MOCK04-WRITE-P4-Q02: Use a polite formal register, explain a specific impact and justify a feasible request.

One possible response (128 words): Dear Project Coordinator, Public access could make the sound archive valuable to people who cannot visit in person. I support that aim, but the proposed form leaves two practical questions unanswered. Contributors do not know whether they will hear edited versions before publication, and the process for informing other identifiable speakers is unclear. Could you provide a short review stage in which contributors check that an edit has not changed the context or meaning? A simple explanation for people being recorded would also help volunteers apply the process consistently. I am not suggesting that recordings must remain unedited, since shortening may improve usability. Clear responsibilities and a defined review deadline would protect meaning without making publication unnecessarily difficult. Thank you for considering these points. Yours sincerely, Alex Reed.

MOCK04 | LISTENING TRANSCRIPTS

MOCK04-LIST-R01

The booking is confirmed, although the room number on your original email is provisional. Check the display when you arrive; the time shown in the email remains correct.

MOCK04-LIST-R02

The repair estimate excludes parts that cannot be inspected until the casing is removed. Labour is included. We will contact you before fitting anything that would increase the total.

MOCK04-LIST-R03

I would not call the session a failure. We did not reach a decision, but we finally agreed on what evidence we need. That should make the next meeting more productive.

MOCK04-LIST-R04

Your membership renews automatically unless you cancel by Friday. Cancelling stops the next payment; it does not remove access during the period you have already paid for.

MOCK04-LIST-R05

The ticket price has not risen. The total looks higher because the optional meal was selected by default. Remove that choice if you only want admission.

MOCK04-LIST-R06

The speaker can attend remotely, but the demonstration requires someone in the room to handle the equipment. We need a local assistant, not a replacement speaker.

MOCK04-LIST-R07

The figures in the summary are rounded. For the exact amounts, use the appendix. The difference is small, but it matters if you are checking whether the totals add up.

MOCK04-LIST-R08

We can hold the item for three days without payment. A deposit extends that period to a week. It does not reduce the final price, but it is deducted from the amount still owing.

MOCK04-LIST-R09

The morning session is fully booked. There are places after lunch, though the advanced activity runs only in the morning. Choose the afternoon only if the introductory work meets your needs.

MOCK04-LIST-R10

Man: The new map looks clearer. Woman: Visually, yes. But the symbols are not explained anywhere. Man: Then we should add a key before printing, even if it takes a little more space.

MOCK04-LIST-R11

We cannot guarantee that the replacement will arrive before your trip. If the original item remains usable, keep it until the new one arrives; returning it now could leave you with neither.

MOCK04-LIST-R12

The survey was sent to everyone, but only recent visitors replied in large numbers. We should be careful about treating the result as the view of people who stopped coming.

MOCK04-LIST-R13

The revised route is shorter in distance, although the steep section may make it slower for some walkers. We will keep the original estimated finish time rather than promise an earlier return.

MOCK04-LIST-R14

I joined to improve my writing, and that has happened. What I did not anticipate was how much I would learn by commenting on drafts by other people. Explaining why a sentence confused me made me notice similar problems in my own work. That indirect gain has been the most useful part.

MOCK04-LIST-R15

The open discussion sounds democratic, but the same confident people speak first each time. Nobody is deliberately excluding anyone. Still, an invitation to contribute is not enough if the format rewards quick responses. I would like a short period for individual notes before the conversation begins.

MOCK04-LIST-R16

I used to think the practical sessions were a distraction from serious study. Then I attended one and had to explain a concept while actually using it. The gaps in my understanding became obvious. Reading the description had not convinced me; taking part did.

MOCK04-LIST-R17

I do not mind volunteering, but the expected commitment keeps expanding. A two-hour task has gradually become responsibility for the whole event. Before agreeing again, I would need a defined role and an end date. My objection is to the uncertainty about duties, not to helping.

MOCK04-LIST-R18

Woman: The council wants residents to vote on the library's next major purchase. I welcome the chance to have a say, but the choices are presented without their ongoing costs.

Man: Exactly. A popular option may require staff or maintenance that the initial price does not reveal. Still, I would not leave the decision entirely to specialists.

Woman: Neither would I. Specialists should explain the trade-offs, then residents can express informed preferences. My concern is that the vote will be treated as binding even if turnout is tiny.

Man: Low turnout is a problem, though I would be more concerned about whether different groups are represented. A large response from one organised group can be misleading too.

Woman: That is true. Numbers alone cannot establish that the result reflects the whole community.

Man: I would publish who responded in broad terms and invite further comments where there are gaps.

Woman: I can support that, provided the process has a clear deadline. Otherwise consultation could postpone the purchase indefinitely.

MOCK04-LIST-R19

The evaluation of our pilot scheme looked straightforward. We compared attendance before and after the change, and the increase was substantial. I was ready to recommend expansion. A colleague then asked who had stopped attending. That question initially seemed beside the point: the total had risen. But the new participants were mainly people who already used several of our services, while some of the people the scheme was intended to reach had disappeared from the records. We had improved one visible result without establishing that we had met the original purpose. The discovery did not make the increase meaningless, nor did it prove that the change caused every departure. It did mean that our recommendation had outrun the evidence. We conducted follow-up interviews and separated different groups in the analysis. The final recommendation was narrower, with conditions attached to expansion. I found that less satisfying than announcing an unqualified success. It was also more responsible. An evaluation should be capable of changing the decision, not merely supplying impressive figures for a decision that has already been made. Otherwise the appearance of rigour can protect an assumption instead of testing it.

MOCK04-LIST-R20

I used to believe that publishing all the details of a decision was enough to make it transparent. During a public consultation, we placed the full technical report online and invited comments. Few people responded, and those who did often focused on a minor issue that happened to be easy to understand. We had made the information available without making the decision intelligible. For the next consultation, we explained the alternatives, the criteria being used and the points on which evidence was uncertain. The full report remained available. Some colleagues worried that the shorter explanation gave us too much control over what readers noticed. That was a legitimate concern, so we asked an independent reviewer to check whether important trade-offs had been omitted. The revised process did not remove disagreement. It changed its quality: people could challenge the assumptions that actually shaped the choice. I would not claim that a clear summary is neutral simply because it is clear. Selection always matters. But refusing to select anything can also exclude people, by making participation depend on the time and specialist knowledge needed to interpret an entire technical document.
